SPECTRUM NEWS VIDEO: What happens when you bring technology and visual arts together? An incredible performance. Artists lit up downtown Binghamton using buildings as their canvases Friday night. Thousands flocked to the area to see art come to life at the third annual Luma Projection Arts Festival, which celebrates technology and visual arts. Artists from around the world showed off their work by combining projection mapping with animation and interactivity. Binghamton's festival is the largest of its kind in the United States, bringing more than 30,000 people annually.
